

CIRCLE POEMS!

We've been thinking about all kinds of transport this week. How many transport words do you know? Put your knowledge to the test with these clever circle poems.

SHIRITORI

Shiritori is a Japanese word game where players take turns to think of words. Each word must start with the sound that ends the word before.

For example APPLE EGG GREEN.

TIME TO CREATE!

Try using the same technique to write a poem all about transport. Each word should start with the last letter of the word before. Try to link up the end of your poem as well. The last word should end with the same letter that the first word starts with.

It might look something like this:

Make your poem as long and varied as you can. Try to include every transport word you can think of.
